IMPOSTER SYNDROME

im·pos·tor
imˈpästər/
noun
noun: imposter
a person who pretends to be someone else in order to deceive others, especially for fraudulent gain.

synonyms: impersonator, masquerader, pretender, imitator, deceiver, hoaxer, trickster, fraudster, swindler; More fake, fraud, sham, phony, scammer
Impostor Syndrome

- Describes individuals marked by an inability to internalize their accomplishments and exhibit a persistent fear of being exposed as a "fraud".

- Despite external evidence of their competence, remain convinced that they are frauds and do not deserve success they have achieved.

- Proof of success is dismissed as luck, timing, or as a result of deceiving others.

Impostor Syndrome

Term coined in 1978 by clinical psychologists Pauline R. Clance and Suzanne A. Imes

While early research focused on prevalence among high-achieving women, impostor syndrome has been found to affect men and women in roughly equal numbers

Also known as: impostor phenomenon, fraud syndrome, impostor experience

This is Dr. Adams. She’s a social psychologist and the world’s top expert on imposter syndrome.

Haha, don’t be silly! There are lots of scholars who have made more significant...

...oh my god.
Feel like a fraud?

You're not alone. Many graduate students question whether they are prepared to do the work they do. Here's how to overcome that feeling and recognize your strengths.

TED Talks
"Impostor syndrome" is the name given to the feelings that many young scientists describe: Their accomplishments are just luck or deceit, and they're in over their heads.

Key to getting past it, experts say, is making accurate, realistic assessments of your performance. Perhaps equally important: knowing you're not alone.
- the list of people who sometimes worry about being uncovered as an impostor is as impressive as it is long.

- But what matters most is not whether we occasionally (or regularly) fear failing, looking foolish or not being ‘whatever enough’; it’s whether we give those fears the power to keep us from taking the actions needed to achieve our goals and highest aspirations.
Syndromes of Imposter Syndrome

- “I’ve been lucky. Hope it holds out.”
- “Feels Achievements don’t have anything to do with yourself”
- “Weird condition that has a name? Like Alfred Hitchcock movie”

Syndromes of Imposter Syndrome

- Diligence
- Feeling of being Phony
- Use of Charm
- Avoiding Displays of Confidence

http://www.researchgrp.com/blog/impostor-syndrome/
Diligence

- Work hard in order to prevent people from discovering they are "impostors".

- Hard work often leads to more praise and success, perpetuates the impostor feelings and fears.
Diligence

- Work hard in order to prevent people from discovering they are "impostors".
- Hard work often leads to more praise and success, perpetuates the impostor feelings and fears.

"Impostor" may feel they need to work two or three times as hard, so over-prepare, tinker and obsess over details.

Feeling of being Phony

Often attempt to give supervisors and professors answers that they believe they want

Feeling of being Phony

Often attempt to give supervisors and professors answers that they believe they want

- Often leads to an increase in feeling like they are "being a fake".

http://www.researchgrp.com/blog/impostor-syndrome/
Use of Charm

- Use intuitive perceptiveness and charm to gain approval and praise from supervisors
- Seek out relationships with supervisors to help them increase abilities intellectually and creatively

Use of Charm

- Use intuitive perceptiveness and charm to gain approval and praise from supervisors
- Seek out relationships with supervisors to help them increase abilities intellectually and creatively

- However, when supervisor gives praise or recognition, feel that praise is based on charm - not on ability.

The Perfectionist

Set excessively high goals for themselves, and when they fail to reach a goal, experience major self-doubt and worry about measuring up.

https://www.fastcompany.com/40421352/the-five-types-of-impostor-syndrome-and-how-to-beat-them
The Superwoman/Superman

Since people who experience this phenomenon are convinced they’re phonies among real-deal colleagues, they often push themselves to work harder and harder to measure up.

https://www.fastcompany.com/40421352/the-five-types-of-impostor-syndrome-and-how-to-beat-them
The Natural Genius

Judge success based on abilities as opposed to efforts.

If they have to work hard at something, assume they must be bad at it. When not able to do something quickly or fluently, alarm sounds.

https://www.fastcompany.com/40421352/the-five-types-of-impostor-syndrome-and-how-to-beat-them
The Rugged Individualist

Believe asking for help reveals their phoniness.

May refuse assistance so that can prove their worth.

https://www.fastcompany.com/40421352/the-five-types-of-impostor-syndrome-and-how-to-beat-them
The Expert

May feel like they somehow tricked their employer into hiring them.

Deeply fear being exposed as inexperienced or unknowledgeable.

Recognize your expertise

• Remember what you do well

I am an expert in certain things (not all things!)
I am knowledgeable, not infallible

Other skills that I bring to the table:
Communication
Realize that no one is perfect

- Change your thinking

Postdoc: “Best review I can do.”

If they want Brian to review this paper – they can ask him.

Statistician: “Best, ethical, thorough work I can do – in given time frame, while balancing all projects.”

Management: “Best decisions on behalf of my staff with information I have at the time.” - Trust staff
