NEWSLETTER -- OCTOBER 1966

MANPOWER FOR MILITARY SERVICE -- NEW RESEARCH APPROACHES

In procuring and retaining military manpower, often conflicting goals must be mediated--for example, personal equity, military effectiveness, and a strong civilian economy. What research and statistics are needed for policy development and operational planning?

Chairman: Harold Goldstein, Bureau of Labor Statistics

Speakers: Harold Wool, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower), "Research programs in support of the D. O. D. study of military manpower procurement policies."

Stuart H. Altman, Brown University, "Factors influencing the supply of volunteers for military service."

Kenneth H. McGill, Selective Service System, "Characteristics and uses of data from the selective service system."

Gilbert Bernstein, Research Analysis Corporation, "A computer model for projecting civilian and military manpower."

Discussant: Stuart H. Garfinkle, Manpower Administration, Department of Labor.

WHEN AND WHERE: Tuesday, October 11, 8 P.M., Lecture Room, National Academy of Sciences, 2101 Constitution Avenue, N.W. (Please note place).
